"She looked down a slope, needing to squint for the sunlight, onto a vast sprawl of houses which had grown up all together, like a well-tended crop, from the dull brown earth; and she thought of the time she'd opened a transistor radio to replace a battery and seen her first printed circuit. The ordered swirl of houses and streets, from this high angle, sprang at her now with the same unexpected, astonishing clarity as the circuit card had. Though she knew even less about radios than Southern Californians, there were to both outward patterns a hieroglyphic sense of concealed meaning, of an intent to communicate."

-Thomas Pynchon, The Crying of Lot 49

"Many have trouble making out the words. Smeared print, ghost images. In the altered shelves, the ambient roar, in the plain and heartless fact of their decline, they try to work their way through confusion. But in the end it doesn't matter what they see or think they see. The terminals are equipped with holographic scanners, which decode the binary secret of every item, infallibly. This is the language of waves and radiation, or how the dead speak to the living."

-Don DeLillo, White Noise

NY, NY 8/14/2003 (blackout date)

The Laws of Bodh[i] Circu[it]s:

- 1. In any circus there is an enormous amount (Σ_i) of grieving.
- 2. If elephants hold tails in a circle (bringing a system back to its initial state, i), the net result is success at the expense of “nature.”
- 3. circuit = i (tail-to-tell) has no meaning unless it is traveled.
- 4. (this is an alternate placeholder for defining the same mole).

The Principles of Alg[a]e[bra] D[ra[in]]:

- 5. When circuit i goes down, it cascades to the sum (Σ_e) of all the elephant’s ancestors.
- 6. True (aka ələ) heroes are(r)are and require the blind pull of sacrifice.
- 7. Instinct seeks information and heat (or the absence of), NOT the carrier frequency.
- 8. In order to really live, we (moles) must embrace the inevitable.

NY, NY May 26, 2003

On September 1, 2001 after finishing a climb up a long white granite slab, I was rappelling down a long, thick black rope

I came to a belay station with dirty dishes. I gathered up the cereal bowls and dumped out the milk. The milk traveled, suspended, through the air
and hit my brother, the ground.

But I couldn't carry everything. I was concerned that the porcelain and crystal might hit the people below, but I had no choice but to throw the dishes down the hundreds of stories to the ground.
It didn't make sense because they would break.

But I needed my hands free. But then I felt guilty.
There was so much junk, wine, funnels, glasses and papers.
In due time I would have to climb back up for the rest.

I rappelled recklessly to the ground. When I prepared to climb back up, the rest of humanity told me I was crazy to trust the rope.

My theory was that if it held me once already, what were the chances of it failing now? Once I had the dirty and broken dishes down to the base of the façade, I was annoyed that I would have to take them back to "civilization".

At that particular moment

I was just happy
to be at the base
of the climb,
at the base of a sheer white granite wall, until
I noticed the black widow climbing down the rope and realized
I was just one unpromising pound of flesh in the web.

The (hairless) Japanese dogs were meant to pull the sled that contained (the) vitamin C (and then some). But the Akitas lacked hindsight and perseverance, leaving me to fend for myself. It was taxing getting the sled up the stream of sinusoidal synapses.

(Only primates and guinea pigs have lost the genetic information necessary to create vitamin C on their own recognizance. Without vitamin C our blood vessels (will) become unglued. Every time I stopped to eat (my load)(sic) got lighter, and I was fitter for it.)

I made it to a covered bridge (engraved with the logo of the same vitamin company whose product I pitched). In the middle (of the bridge) was a drainpipe to relieve oneself. As I started to take a leak, the bridge came apart (below my feet). Plank by plank (step by step) I maintained control of my own reins, but had to sacrifice the sled and the freight.

It was then that the five unleashed dogs appeared licking my face (and I knew I was more alive than before (for risking death)).

no translation... stumped by the flux of genomic (r)evolution & global oscillat(ions)... perverse hunchbacks whirling...

Erosion emanates from thee abominable basin (272-feet below sea level) with no outlet from a century ago (when the Colorado River breached a manmade fabrication). Only evaporation can stave off the stagnant coagulation sustained by excess irrigation drain-off laced with pesticides and unwanted Coolie Loaches (originally from the South China Sea) flushed down the toilet (sewer-trout and Sauer kraut swelling at the seams). Discharge records do not account for all drainage inflow.

The salty sediment (follicles and scales) occupying the depression is a cock -starved reservoir of abandoned lust. The initial capacity to endure is scientifically tested over successive intervals to verify that it fits the curve of the sole of the shoe (grossly enlarged due to a glandular disease). An intense reclamation effort is underway to restore the morphology to its inherent nature (for recreational (not procreational) purposes). No drain for the dirtied bathwater (I plunge in desperation, hip deep in baby pooh). No sublimation, just accumulation, no aggregation to rise, to leave behind the freedom of dreaming. Mushrooming warts (putrefied cauliflower heads) globbing on the (belly-up) floating fish reek of our spiritual origins, but still, how (and why) the throttled gills continue to pump (in their sleep) is beyond me, born only to suffer (a policy of catch with no release).

Exiled to the shore (not eligible for parole), the dinosaur undulates on the thighs beneath the shade of the Bodhi bush (a spurt of a rattle revealing side-winding in the tracks, while our tires (also confined to the grooves) dig deeper into the sand, until the axle bottoms out, the burnt oil spills and we are spent. With the smog diffusing over from Los Angeles, the Salton Sea has no apparent horizon (no lines of accountability) and no recreational watercraft on the surface. We are confined to the banks with an electro-static generator cranked at 2400 amps, making a grotesque circuit reaching deep into the earth with fabricated electrodes jury-rigged from reams of tinfoil and salt (hip deep with shovels, digging our own graves). Now we stew in the heat reading the Battlefield where the Moon Says I Love You until the Tesla coil locks off. We trace the fuel lines, dissecting the pump, revealing a ripped diaphragm. Nobody said this would be a glamorous job (like picking up used condoms on the beach the morning after) but I needed to be cashed (just one in a string of stark motel rooms with Gideon bibles). Now I see it all from sterility of an airplane, with a 30,000-foot view of the bifurcated erosion, feeling an overwhelming detachment, not knowing if I belong (not knowing if I want to belong) to any church-state that would create such a wonder.

a blind man with cowboy hat
 reading on the subway this morning reads with two fingers
 one from left to right
 the other from right to left meeting in the middle
 we have two eyes
 (but can only read)
 one thread at a time
 imagine reading in stereo
 reading by feeling
 to the paper all white
